Choosing a Landscape Architect or Designer is so Critical to a Good Design and Functional Space!

- compliment the design and style of your home by examining your lifestyle and preferences
- choosing the right products, borders, accents, and accessories that work well with your home and existing landscape or grading of property (mosaics)
- scale and proportion of all elements within the design such as retaining walls, pergolas, patios, driveways, and fireplace areas
- added value through incorporating the correct elements & products that exist in our industry
- adding curb appeal that suits the neighborhood and surroundings
- make the design safe and practical

Anyone can dream about the space they have in their yard but planning the space takes experience and a lot of thought. Plans do not necessarily need to be a formal drawing, but they do need to be well planned out, and to scale in order to understand how best to use the space. This little bit of homework goes a long way and ensures your investment will be enjoyed for many years to come.

Ask us about our home consulting and outdoor space design network.

Think about what you want - do you need a place for kids to play? A place for the dog? For barbecue? For storage? Do you want a shady corner? Seating for a dozen? A work-shop? Make a list of your 'have-to-have' items.

Now think about function - you'll want a soft surface under a swing set, but might want solid pathways for well-traveled areas. Wooden deck or stone patio. Cost may help you decide which material to use. Play around with a plan on paper, but use a garden hose or can of spray paint to experiment with shapes on the ground. Paths should be wide enough to accommodate your lawn mower and wheelbarrow. Include the placement of doors, windows, access points and views.

Think about privacy - hedges are great living screens, but take years to grow big enough to be effective and trimming can be a hassle. Vines can be effective screens. There are a variety of fence styles available as well.

Don't create a drainage problem - water must drain away from your house or it will drain into it, and long term can cause serious issues with your home. Keep it in mind when installing paths, patios or ponds.

Style, colour and texture play an important role in landscape design - they add interest, shade, humour and pop. Garden tours, books, and the internet are all great mediums to see what other people have done and what outcomes and style appeal to you.

Plant the biggest items first - trees take several to many years to mature, shrubs take a few years and flowers only a season or two. Think about the shade you create with a tree and make sure it falls where you want it. Obviously its easier to move a flower than a tree, so make your mistakes on paper.

Don't be overwhelmed - you don't have to do it all at one time, or even all by yourself. A well thought out plan can be phased in as time and budget allow. A landscape designer or architect can draw up a plan for you and you proceed at your own pace. Remember that your relationship with your landscape architect should be a two way street. It is your space but as a professional they can and should help you through any potential pitfalls and prevent wasting time and money.

Have fun with it - gardening is supposed to be a stress-buster not a stress-maker
